A man fell 20 feet down a subway grate, an incident likely to terrify New Yorkers. / MILES DIXON

Man plunges 20 feet down subway grate

Terrifying. The man had opened the grate in Queens and was trying to retrieve his keys when he fell 20 feet.

The worst fear of many New Yorkers came true Tuesday morning when a man fell a horrifying 20 feet through an open subway grate in Queens.

The man, who was not immediately identified, fell through the grate near 24-20 Jackson Avenue, in Long Island City, after opening it to retrieve his keys.

Amazingly, he survived — and was only treated for minor injuries.

But New Yorkers, such as Raymond Bethel, who spends his days walking the New York City streets as a messenger, say they are wary of walking along the metal subway grates.

"You just don't know what could happen," Bethel said, adding he's never witnessed a mishap.

MTA spokesman Kevin Ortiz said grate accidents are "rare," and the last accident was a few years ago.

The NYPD said no charges have been filed against the man. A police source said breaking a subway grate and entering MTA property could carry with it criminal mischief and trespass charges.

Quoted

"You just don't know what could happen."

Ortiz said the number of grates across the city wasn't available, but that all are secured and locked. A report by PIX11 in 2014 estimated the number of grates to be about 39,000.

The new Second Avenue subway line will not have any subway grates by design, MTA Capital Construction Company president Michael Horodniceanu told reporters on a recent construction tour.

The air from the trains will flow above ground through ventilation towers instead.

Last fall, a man emerged from a subway grate in Greenwich Village before throwing a smoke bomb into Bar Pitti.

Perhaps the worst accident in recent years happened in May 2009 when more than 30 girls posing for a school photo fell through a grate in front of Yeshiva Shaare Torah.

Some of the girls broke bones or were treated for head injuries, according to the New York Post.

In 2007, Jessica Hinkmon, then 26, fell 10 feet down through a Con Edison grate.

Eleven Madison Park gets gong

The annual list of the world's 50 best restaurants was released and the city's very own Eleven Madison Park was honored as No. 5.

In a post profiling the restaurant, Eleven Madison Park was described as "dazzling" and yet devoid of "a hint of stuffiness."

The restaurant's "multi-course tasting menu" costs $225 per person. Other New York restaurants that made the list were Le Bernardin at No. 18, Per Se at No. 40, and Blue Hill at Stone Barns at No. 49.

Boy survives being run over

A small boy was lucky to escape with only minor injuries after a car jumped a curb and hit him on a pavement in Brooklyn while he was playing Monday.

The 4-year-old was playing with a stuffed animal when the car jumped a curb on Seventh Avenue in Sunset Park, police said. A video shows the car jumping the curb and taking down a small tree, which drags the child under the car. He was taken to Lutheran Hospital and was in a stable condition, according to officials. NYC. Ban on city's horse-drawn carriages can't come soon enough for supporters

It's been nearly a decade since the Coalition to Ban Horse-Drawn Carriages launched its campaign, and the goal is beginning to be realized — to the relief of the New Yorkers and visitors to New York City who support it.

The horse-drawn carriage ban bill was introduced into the City Council in December 2014. The legislation, Intro 573, is in the Transportation Committee and cannot be voted on until an environmental assessment study has been completed. The ban promised by Mayor Bill de Blasio is getting closer, and many say it can't happen soon enough.

"A ban of this inherently dangerous and inhumane trade is long overdue, and so we're delighted that the legislation can finally move ahead," said Elizabeth Forel, president and founder of the Coalition to Ban Horse-Drawn Carriages.

The coalition launched its campaign in 2006 after a horrific carriage accident resulted in the death of a five-year-old horse named Spotty.

Students graduate from pioneering school

High School. Six students graduated with associate degrees, IBM jobs.

One week before he was supposed to start high school, Gabriel Rosa didn't have an acceptance letter from any school.

On Tuesday, he graduated with both a high school diploma and an associate degree in computer systems technology — in addition to having a job offer ready to go at IBM.

P-Tech, the school that helped him "grow out of the box that [he] was in," in his own words, is the first of its kind in the nation — possibly the world.

The Crown Heights school is based on a private-public partnership, with funding coming from the city and resources in the form of mentors and support from IBM. The New York City Department of Education, CUNY and the New York City College of Technology are partners along with IBM.

Part of the intent was to address a lack of diversity in STEM fields, and to give kids in underserved neighborhoods more access to science and tech education.

There are now 27 schools in the U.S., with a total of 40 expected to be open by the fall.

4 Reasons FIFA's Blatter resigned

Analysis. Metro breaks down some likely causes.

Sepp Blatter's resignation Tuesday as the head of FIFA was stunning — especially for the fact that it came just four days after he was re-elected to a fifth term. The 79-year-old FIFA president, who had run for reelection on Friday despite the corruption scandal sweeping world soccer, revealed his resignation in Zurich, and said a new, special election would be held soon. Metro compiled the most likely reasons behind Blatter's resignation. JOHN A. OSWALD

1 The Loretta Lynch rant

"There is something that smells," a defiant Blatter said in his post-election victory lap on Friday as he took a swipe at Attorney General Loretta Lynch, who oversaw the investigation in Brooklyn.

Blatter said, "Listen, with all the respect to the judicial system of the U.S. with a new minister of justice. The Americans, if they have a financial crime that regards American citizens then they must arrest these people there and not in Zurich when we have a congress."

2 UEFA threat

The European soccer association, except for Russia and Spain, wanted Blatter gone — and has gone to great lengths to say so. UEFA president Michel Platini, who is now the No. 1 favorite to replace Blatter, had threatened to walk away.

BLATTER

3 Visa and other advertisers for world soccer

Visa, one of the world's largest companies, was leading the corporate boardroom demand for change in FIFA, including a call last week for Blatter's ouster.

Other companies — McDonald's, Adidas, Hyundai and Coca-Cola — were also rumbling.

All made it clear that sponsorship of the World Cup could suffer if corruption charges were not properly dealt with.

4 $10M 'bribe'

The New York Times revealed Monday that the scandal had moved a step closer to Blatter when it identified his right-hand man, secretary general Jerome Valcke, as the person accused of authorizing a $10 million bribe that lies at the heart of U.S. Attorney General Loretta Lynch's entire case. Blatter was yet to be named in the Justice Department's 47-page indictment, but several news agencies are now reporting that prosecutors are honing in on him.

FIFA, for its part, blamed on a dead man the $10 million payment, which prosecutors allege was made to FIFA by South Africa in order to buy the 2010 World Cup. It said the late chairman of FIFA's finance committee, Julio Grondona, who died last year, had authorized the $10 million payment.

Web bursting over Blatter

All a-Twitter. FIFA president Sepp Blatter, 79, announced his resignation, and the Internet had a lot to say about it.

Sepp Blatter, the president of FIFA, announced his resignation Tuesday afternoon amid the corruption scandal rocking the world of soccer.

Blatter, 79, released a statement saying: "I have been reflecting deeply about my presidency and about the forty years in which my life has been inextricably bound to FIFA and the great sport of football. I cherish FIFA more than anything and I want to do only what is best for FIFA and for football. I felt compelled to stand for re-election, as I believed that this was the best thing for the organisation. That election is over but FIFA's challenges are not."

Blatter went on to say that FIFA was in need of a "profound overhaul" and that he did not have the "mandate from the entire world of football" to implement that change.

Twitter, the collective comedian of the Internet, jumped on the back of the scandal and rode it all the way home.

Six things you need

1 Hundreds missing after ship capsizes on China river

Rescuers searched on Tuesday for more than 400 people, many of them elderly Chinese tourists, missing after a cruise boat was hit by a freak tornado and capsized on the Yangtze River in what may become China's worst shipping disaster in nearly 70 years.

Battling bad weather, divers and other rescue workers pulled five people they found trapped in the upturned hull of the four-deck Eastern Star, a small fraction of the 458 people state media said were on board when the ship capsized on Monday night.

Rescue operations appeared extended late into Tuesday night with paramilitary vehicles, dozens of police and soldiers as well as medical and meteorological trucks surrounding the site.

Soldiers set up periodic roadblocks along a muddy path, allowing only official vehicles into the area in the central province of Hubei. REUTERS

2 Detainee alleges CIA sexual abuse, torture beyond Senate findings

The CIA used a wider array of sexual abuse and other forms of torture than was disclosed in a Senate report last year, according to a Guantanamo Bay detainee turned government cooperating witness.

Majid Khan said interrogators poured ice water on his genitals, twice videotaped him naked and repeatedly touched his "private parts" — none of which was described in the Senate report. Interrogators, some of whom smelled of alcohol, also threatened to beat him with a hammer and baseball bats, Khan said. REUTERS

3 Bill to limit domestic spy programs passes Congress

The U.S. Senate on Tuesday passed a bill reforming a government domestic spying program that swept up millions of Americans' telephone records, sending the bill to the White House for President Barack Obama to sign into law.

Reversing U.S. security policy that had been in place since shortly after the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks, the bill would end a system exposed by Edward Snowden in 2013. The eavesdropping agency collected and searched records of phone calls looking for terrorism leads but it was not allowed to listen to the content of calls. REUTERS

Two men plead guilty to Ferguson bomb plot

Two men pleaded guilty in federal court on Tuesday to conspiring to blow up public buildings and police vehicles during protests in Ferguson, Missouri, last year, prosecutors said.

Olajuwon Davis, 22, and Brandon Baldwin, 24, admitted to the explosive charges and also pleaded guilty to conspiring to buy firearms for felons, who are barred by law from acquiring them, the U.S. Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of Missouri, said in a statement.

Instagram takes steps to open platform to advertisers

Instagram said that it is taking steps to make its ads available to all types of businesses, not just hand-selected brands.

Starting in June, Instagram is rolling out to advertisers the ability to more closely direct campaigns by zip code and other data sets like interests in the same ways that brands can target consumers on its parent company Facebook Inc.

In addition, it will let advertisers link to external websites or app stores with buttons such as "shop now," "sign up," "learn more" and "install now." REUTERS

Kerry's doc wants him up and walking

Secretary of State John Kerry was said to be in "good condition" Tuesday after undergoing surgery at Massachusetts General for the leg he broke while cycling in France over the weekend.

His orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Dennis Burke, released a statement saying that Kerry was awake throughout the procedure and that the doctor planned to have his patient up and walking as early as today.

The procedure was uncomplicated, the fracture was fully repaired and we plan to get him up walking on Wednesday," Burke said in a statement. "I anticipate a short hospitalization." REUTERS

EMMA STONE

MATT LEE

Why does Emma Stone think she can look as Asian as me?

Reaction. Metro reporter Matthew Lee is fired up about Emma Stone's casting in "Aloha."

When I first heard that Emma Stone was playing a hapa (a mixed person of partial Asian ancestry) in the upcoming film "Aloha," I couldn't really compute the information.

Which is weird because I'm half-Chinese and we're supposed to be good at computing things, right?

"Emma Stone is playing a hapa?" my little half-Asian brain thought as I stared off into the distance. "But … Emma Stone looks nothing like me, or any of the other hapas I know. She doesn't even look … Asian."

For those of you unaware, Emma Stone is starring alongside Bradley Cooper in Cameron Crowe's upcoming film "Aloha" as a half-Swedish, quarter-Hawaiian and quarter-Chinese woman named Allison Ng.

I'm pretty sure I know at least one Allison Ng, and let me tell you, even if I don't know an Allison Ng, Emma Stone does not look even remotely like an Allison Ng. Why couldn't the producers of "Aloha" cast, um I don't know, an actress who's actually of Asian descent to play Allison Ng?

Emma Stone's casting in "Aloha" is just another very disappointing instance of Hollywood casting white actors and actresses in Asian roles. Hollywood has this sick dual preoccupation with pandering to Asian markets by including Asian characters in their films (Dr. Helen Cho in "Avengers: Age of Ultron"), and simultaneously filling Asian roles with Caucasian actors.

Quoted

"Let's be real, a teriyaki burger at the very inauthentic P.F. Chang's looks more hapa than Emma Stone." Matt Lee

I have looked forward to seeing an Asian-American female lead in a major Hollywood film that wasn't set in Ancient China. The only major motion picture I can recall that featured an Asian-American woman in a leading role were the "Charlie's Angels" films. While Lucy Liu may be a boss (and the soundtrack for the first "Charlie's Angels" was amazing) — I'd like to see more representation of half my racial identity on screen.

To be honest, I remain unconvinced that all of this is actually happening. Perhaps, I'm in some strange nightmare, or trapped in some bizarre alternate dimension of idiocy. It is a reality though, a disturbing one at that.

All I have to say is: "Get your s— together, Hollywood."

Iggy Azalea got engaged for her boyfriend's birthday

What's the best way to celebrate your 30th birthday with your famous Australian rapper girlfriend? Proposing marriage, apparently. At least that's what NBA star Nick Young did, asking Iggy Azalea to marry him during his big party, dropping to one knee and producing a sizeable 10-carat yellow diamond ring, according to TMZ. Oh, and the happy occasion was all caught on camera, naturally. Young and Azalea have been dating for two years — after a first date that apparently involved a trip to Target. Who knows, maybe that's where they'll be registered. Also, from the looks of the video, there's a roller coaster at that birthday party. That's dope.

Drake Bell fails at Twitter again

At this point, former Nickelodeon star Drake Bell is getting better known for Twitter dust-ups than … whatever show he was on, I can't remember. Which kind of proves my point. This time, though, he's not getting into online fisticuffs with Justin Bieber fans. Instead, he's displaying a remarkable lack of trans sensitivity in response to Caitlyn Jenner's big reveal — or at least he was until he deleted his offending tweet. "Sorry … still calling you Bruce," he tweeted this week, immediately causing a firestorm of responses. He then tried to explain himself, though that didn't help much either: "I'm not dissing him! I just don't want to forget his legacy! He is the greatest athlete of all time! Chill out!" There are so many things wrong with that statement, I don't really know where to begin.

Why Goldie Hawn never married Kurt Russell

Goldie Hawn and Kurt Russell have been happy together for 32 years but never bothered tying the knot. So what gives? Hawn is happy to tell you. "A lasting relationship isn't about marriage. It's about compatibility and communication. And you both need to want it to work. If one person does not want it to work, it isn't going to work," Hawn tells Porter magazine. "Intention is the key. It's also about not losing yourself in each other. Being together, two pillars holding up the house and the roof, and being different, not having to agree on everything." Sure, but what about all the never-realized wedding presents?

Channing Tatum loves a good prank, so when he launched a charity contest that will send a fan to the "Magic Mike XXL" premiere, he thought it would be a great chance to bust out his acting chops. Tatum dons old-age makeup, glasses and a pretty terrible goatee to pose as a marketing exec quizzing fans at an advanced screening about what they think of the franchise and Tatum himself. He couldn't keep the ruse up for long, though, especially when his character decided to give an audience member a lap dance.

"Fraction Of An Inch" Success And Failure With Popular

Vital Information All Knee Arthritis Sufferers

By Matt Edgar-Health Writer
Manhattan - In just a moment I'm going to tell you about a very "candid" and somewhat embarrassing moment I had with a doctor.

A moment most doctors would not want you to know about.

As I reveal what happened in that moment - it will become clear to you not only why this doctor has so much success treating knee arthritis pain... but you will also discover a possible way to relieve some or all of your pain, too.

But before I tell you all that - let me ask you this: How would you like to finally have a real medical solution for your knee arthritis pain?

Not some scam sold on an infomercial or the internet. A real medical treatment that has already worked for countless people just like you and is covered by most insurance and medicare?

Can you imagine what it would feel like to be able to eliminate enough of your pain and stiffness so you can get out of bed without pain and go for walks and even do things like play golf or tennis?

How relieved would you be if you felt so much better that you no longer needed to go through total knee replacement surgery and all the grueling rehabilitation?

Sounds Too Good To Be True?

I'm glad we agree. It does sound too good to be true. That's because all patients react differently and get different results from real medical treatments.

That's also why no ethical doctor would promise or guarantee ANY results... for ANY treatment. EVER.

In fact - if you do start hearing over-the-top, exaggerated claims like: "cure for knee arthritis" or "eliminates all pain" or "works for everyone" you should run like heck.

But the fact of the matter is: If you qualify for the treatment you are about to discover, there is a good chance you may be able to relieve some or much of your pain.

I know because thousands of knee arthritis sufferers... just like you... have already found the relief you are looking for.

And even better - this might work for you if your pain is new... or if you have advanced knee arthritis that has made it difficult to even walk.

Here's The Treatment And The Embarrassing Moment

The treatment is called viscosupplemtation. If you have not heard of this treatment - I will explain how it might help you in just a moment. If you have heard of it - or even had this treatment without good results - this information is a "must read."

Here is why: When you have arthritis, one of the things that happens is the lubricating fluid in your joints deceases. This causes joint surfaces to rub, then grind against each other which causes swelling and pain eventually eating way at the cartilage.

Researchers have developed a natural lubricating gel that can be placed in the arthritic knee joint - this cushions and coats the joint allowing it to glide more smoothly which often decreases pain. Sometimes dramatically . Treatment with this special lubricating gel is called Viscosupplementation.

Advanced Knee Arthritis Treatment Offers New Hope For Pain Sufferers In New York City

Nothing Spreads The Word Like Caring Doctors and Results - Knee arthritis sufferers have swarmed the OsteoRelief Center in Manhattan, NYC and Norhtern New j Jersey ever since word got out of their advanced medical procedure for knee arthritis

This all sounds great - in theory. But there is a BIG problem with this treatment.

Allow Me To Explain...

While doing research on this treatment, I traveled to a medical clinic in Northern N.J. right outside NYC (they now have clinics in mid town and downtown).. This clinic had an excellent reputation and I got to speak not only with doctors but with several patients who ranted and raved about the results.

Many said they had tried countless other treatments in the past... including viscosupplementation... but nothing worked until they had viscosupplemtation at this clinic.

I was skeptical, so I asked one of the doctors why. How could it be possible that the same treatment that did not work when done elsewhere... was getting results when done here?

His response was honest and a little shocking. And the bottom line was...

"All Doctors Are Human And Sometimes They Mess Up"

I discovered that this treatment must be VERY PRECISE. In other words, the doctor must be very accurate and actually get the lubricating fluid precisely into the arthritic joint space - or the treatment will be rendered useless.

Many doctors do not want to admit it - but it is very easy to miss the joint space and alter the treatment results.

In fact, research shows that doctors doing these types of joint procedures without advanced imaging may miss the joint space as much as 30% of the time.

Technology To The Rescue

Thankfully technology is solving this problem. How? It's making doctors much more accurate and this treatment much more effective.

Advanced imaging is now available that allows doctors to actually see directly into the joint space and watch the treatment. Doctors can see, or check, if the lubricating fluid goes directly into the joint space - or misses.

The doctor knows if the applied treatment has been a success... or failure... INSTANTLY.

The Difference Between Knee Arthritis Treatment?

Should Know... That Might Be Keeping You In Pain

Here's something incredible: I was able to watch many procedures actually being performed and I was shocked at how many times the doctor thought he had perfect placement... but the imaging proved him wrong.

I was amazed how only a fraction of an inch would make the difference between success and failure.

The best thing is: When the procedure was not perfect - because of the imaging - the doctor knew instantly and was able to make the slight change necessary and achieve the results they were looking for hitting the targeted painful knee joint.

"Double Confirmation" For Best Results

That's why the doctors at this clinic have taken it one giant step further to give their patients the best. They do not just use one form of confirmation during treatment - they use two in their "double confirmation" process. This is to ensure patients get the best possible results.

It became clear to me that using this advanced imaging and "double confirmation" process just might be why the doctors at this medical clinic get results when others were not.

What Results Can Be Expected?

Like all medical treatments, the results vary and can not be predicted. But many knee arthritis sufferers get dramatic results. It is not uncommon for patients to either postpone knee replacement surgery for years... or even permanently cancel it.

Who Is This For?

This treatment is not for everyone - but if you qualify you may be able to relieve some or all of your pain. That's why OsteoRelief has a an innovation for you...

New in paperback. Emma Hooper tells us about her need to keep moving forward

Emma Hooper will be hosting a reading June 4 at 7 p.m. at Brooklyn's Community Bookstore. / MARTIN TOMPKINS

Emma Hooper's novel, "Etta and Otto and Russell and James," started out as a very different book than it turned out to be. The book follows a woman in her 80s, Etta, who rises one morning to walk across Canada's prairie land all the way until she sees the ocean.

"Originally, I had [her husband] Otto going on the journey," Hooper tells us. "Then I had a feminist realization that I was doing that as a socially imposed automatic reaction, where the man does [his] thing and the woman waits. I thought it would be much more interesting if I swapped it around."

Her own journey

Hooper had her own Etta-like journey, albeit on a smaller scale. The author, who is also the solo musician known as Waitress for the Bees, participated in the Land's End to John O'Groats bike ride in England, an 875-mile trek that takes almost three months to complete.

"It was very meditative," she says. "I just like that goal, to always move forward."

Despite the journey, Hooper says she doesn't necessarily feel more connected to Etta than the book's other three primary characters. The novel is told through multiple narratives, which Hooper says helped give her momentum as a writer. "I think I'm just a distractible human," she says. "I liked jumping between them."

She also jumps between writing music and books on a regular basis. "You always hit a wall, so it's nice to be able to jump to another creative outlet when that happens," she says.

Always working

Hooper, who just released another Waitress for the Bees album, teaches creative writing at Bath Spa University in England and is already working on her next book. "It's about mermaids," she reveals. It looks like she isn't slowing down any time soon: always moving forward, one project at a time.

‘Entourage’ is Hollywood glamour on crack

Interview. How playing Sloan prepped Emmanuelle Chriqui for the film industry’s boys club.

Emmanuelle Chriqui stars in “Entourage.” / WARNER BROS.

TOMMASO BODDI / WIREIMAGE

It’s not easy being a woman in the hypermale “Entourage” world, but somehow Emmanuelle Chriqui’s Sloan has managed to come out not too terribly objectified. And, she insists, the training has been invaluable for when real-life moviemaking gets out of hand.

The “Entourage” world can be pretty testosterone-heavy. How do you approach Sloan’s perspective within that?
You know, you just have to approach whatever given situation with complete authenticity, which is all I can do as far as Sloan is concerned. There might be things that morally I don’t agree with or that Emmanuelle would never forgive, but we’re acting, we’re making a television show or a movie. And even in these situations where you go, “Oh my God, I can’t believe it,” Doug [Ellin] and the writers always wrote my character with a lot of integrity. So I kind of just never overthought it.

She always did get better treatment than most female characters in the series.
A hundred percent, and I’ll be the first to admit it. I feel like Doug was particularly protective about my character. He wanted her to stand apart from the other women that came and went. Having said that, the other women characters — like Perrey Reeves’ character, Mrs. Ari, or Constance Zimmer’s character — they’re all strong women. They’re all superstrong women in a man’s world, and that’s one perspective of this town that’s real.

I did find the extras a little distracting, since all of the women in the background were basically models.
I know, right? It’s like, I don’t know where to look. They’re all gorgeous. With “Entourage,” people were always like, “Is it real?” It’s real and then it’s exaggerated for your entertainment potential. It’s, like, the glitz and the glamour but on crack. That’s what the show — and the movie — feel like.

Does working on this series skew your own view of the entertainment industry?
Not really. The only way that I feel it bled into my life was if I’m on other sets and it’s heavily male-dominated, I feel like I’ve had the best training to be strong, be in my body, not be intimidated by a heavy male dominance, and I’m supergrateful for that because a lot — not all, but a lot — of this business is made up of that.

The 'Entourage' movie is for bros (and no one else)

We're just happy Oscar nominee Haley Joel Osment, with Emily Ratajkowski and Adrien Grenier, is back in prominent movies again, even if it's "Entourage." / WARNER BROS. PICTURES

Unlikely movie star Vincent Chase — played by Adrien Grenier, who's so not a real movie star that he's second-billed in his own movie — has directed an expensive blockbuster that reimagines "Jekyll and Hyde" in the DJ world and looks like it was made in 1998. The project is put into jeopardy when a wealthy scion (Haley Joel Osment) tries to sabotage it with "notes."

The lowdown: The bros of "Entourage" still call each other "bro" with all sincerity. That's all you need to know about the "Entourage" movie, which isn't so much a movie as a state of mind — an infantile, horndog plane of pure, unchecked douchery. It's the dude's flip side of another HBO lifestyle fantasy, "Sex and the City," only the lusted-for designer shoes are fake boobs and the apparently inevitable film spinoff is, thankfully, almost an hour shorter. It's just not short enough.

There's less plot here than an average episode of the show, and it's no spoiler to say order will be restored, i.e., that a pudgy Oscar nominee won't best aging rent-a-hunks. We could go on about how it exists in an alternate universe where Piers Morgan is still relevant, about how it thinks Vincent actually has talent, about how all the cameos are not only unfunny but depressingly sour. But who are we kidding? This is a niche film for a niche audience — a celebration of a certain belief system for a certain type of guy that seems to be going out of favor, at least in pop culture, if not in life. Everyone deserves a movie, though, and for the type of old school dude who feels threatened by women who are funny and gays getting married, this is the movie for them.

The Bronx is the new Queens

home

Love where you live

At least one million square feet of residential and hotel development planned so far this year.

TheRealDeal.com is a daily blog and monthly magazine covering real estate in the New York metro area.

THE REAL DEAL

For residents of Manhattan, Brooklyn and Queens, coming across new construction projects in their neighborhoods is commonplace. But for the first time in recent history, the Bronx is getting its fair share of the action.

In the 1980s and the early 2000s, new developments "always fell short of the Bronx when the movement ran out of gas," real estate appraiser Jonathan Miller said. "This go-around that doesn't seem to be the case."

While Manhattan and Brooklyn are adding luxury housing, the Bronx offers something that core markets often lack: affordability. "The Bronx is the new Queens," Miller said. "You're seeing some evidence of it, but we're in the early stages."

Land prices are still relatively low in the Bronx as well — less than $50 per buildable square foot in 2014 — but are expected to rise.

The exact influx into the borough is hard to determine through sales data, Miller said, because the majority of Bronx residents — both new and old — don't own their homes. About 68 percent of the market rents in the Bronx, making it the second-highest rate of the five boroughs after Manhattan's 75 percent.

Since the beginning of 2015, at least 15 new permit applications — totaling 1,221 units over more than 1 million square feet — were filed for new residential and hotel developments in the Bronx, according to TRD's analysis of Department of Buildings records.

Big Manhattan developers are increasingly being drawn to the borough. Youngwoo & Associates, for example, is planning to convert the Bronx General Post Office on the Grand Concourse into a mixed-use building with a food court, office space and retail. CLAIRE MOSES

"Couples are always looking for innovative space-saving solutions. This clever design neatly combines the bases and lids for various sizes of storage containers in the same space as one."

Home trends

"There's a swing back toward this concept of making a happy home," says Walmsley. And it's not just the women. "We're seeing grooms really get involved."

Chalk it up to our fast-paced, Web-ruled lives, but Walmsley and her team have noticed that more and more people want to do things the old way.

"We see so many people buying things for baking," she says. "The woman can be a CEO, but she wants to bake. It's a cool combination of modern-meets-nostalgic."

Another big theme Walmsley sees is a focus on entertaining.

"People are getting more sets of plates," she says. And it's not about fine china. "They're buying one really beautiful set which they dress up with metallic accents."

With entertaining comes cocktails. "There's a huge emphasis for bespoke barware and tools."

Business benefits from the qualities of female employees

Re: 'Why more women need to study science and engineering' (Metro, June 1) I read with high interest Meera Kaul's take on STEM fields and why more women are needed. As a professional engineer and a father of two daughters who have entered the business world, I am even more acutely aware of male dominance in engineering and business in general. But beyond Kaul's push for having women use STEM fields to ensure their career stability, I offer a completely different set of criteria. My experience in hiring and empowering female staff has been terrific because, as compared with men, women seem to be more involved in their work and self-investment to learn "beyond 5 p.m.," are competitive but not hypercompetitive as men mostly are, and are more willing to function in a sharing and engaging manner than their male counterparts. A bit Utopian? Sure, but I would hope even Type A males can take a lesson.

Curry shoots for LeBron's throne as NBA's greatest

NBA Finals. The Cavs and Warriors will both be relying on their stars in hopes of ending their title droughts.

LeBron James will be sure to see plenty of Andre Iguodala during the NBA Finals. / GETTY IMAGES

The Golden State Warriors and Cleveland Cavaliers meet in this year's NBA Finals, representing two long-suffering NBA fanbases. It's been 40 years since the Warriors raised a championship banner, while the Cavs have yet to win a title. It's also the first time since the NBA's inaugural season that two rookie coaches, Steve Kerr of the Warriors and Cavaliers head coach David Blatt, have taken their teams to the NBA Finals.

But which coach, and team, will come out on top? Here are three things to watch for as the series gets underway Thursday (9 p.m., ABC):

Stopping LeBron

The Cavs are back in the Finals because of one man: LeBron James. If you can get past all the complaining to referees and all the "look-at-me" moments, you see a once-in-a-generation player. James chose to return to Cleveland because he wanted to bring a championship back home, and once again he's on the brink of doing that. But with Kyrie Irving (knee) not fully healthy, it could all fall on James to finish the job. This Warriors team has no shortage of options in defending him. Whether it's Harrison Barnes, Andre Iguodala, or Draymond Green, the Warriors are going to throw everything but the kitchen sink at him in hopes of limiting his production. If you're Golden State, you make James beat you with his jumper. The last thing they want is King James driving to the basket and putting them in foul trouble.

The Splash Brothers

It was a scary scene when Klay Thompson began to bleed out of his ear after taking an inadvertent knee to the head last series. Thompson was diagnosed with a concussion last week, but told reporters he expects to be cleared and ready to go for Game 1. Thompson and Steph Curry make up the most dangerous backcourt in the NBA and can shoot their way back into a game in a moment's notice. Curry (73 for 167, 43.7 percent) and Thompson (45 for 106) have hit the most 3-pointers this postseason (as well as the regular season) and that's one part of their game that no opposing team is going to be able to eliminate. There's a good chance James covers Curry at some point, but the Warriors are so good at getting him open that James is going to be doing a lot of chasing.

Homecourt advantage

The Warriors have only lost three games at home all season, one of which came in the playoffs against the Grizzlies. They've got homecourt advantage in the NBA Finals, and they're playing in front of a wild fanbase that's hasn't had a reason to be this wild in a long time. So yes, it's going to be loud. But the Cavs have won six games on the road in the postseason, including their last four. They're obviously going to need to win at least one at Golden State, but it will prove to be their toughest test yet.

Jets' Wilkerson tweets out frustration

Mo, tell us how you really feel.

Following Tuesday's news that the New Orleans Saints gave defensive end Cam Jordan a five-year, $60 million deal, the pressure is now on the New York Jets to secure the future of their own star defensive end. With contract negotiations ongoing to extend Muhammad Wilkerson's stay with the team in this the final year of his rookie contract, the market value of the former first-round pick just went up after Jordan's deal.

All of which led Wilkerson on Tuesday to take to Twitter shortly after news about Jordan's extension trickled out:

"Yup I see how this works," Wilkerson wrote.

MUHAMMAD WILKERSON
GETTY IMAGES

Given their relative comparability in production — Wilkerson has 237 tackles and 24.5 sacks in four seasons and Jordan has 196 tackles and 29 sacks in as many NFL campaigns — it isn't far-fetched to think that the Jets would need to offer their star defensive end similar money. They do hold a bargaining chip, however, with the selection of Leonard Williams with the sixth overall pick in April's NFL draft.

Considered the top player on many draft boards, Williams could be a natural replacement should the Jets look to unload Wilkerson via a trade or prove unable to sign him to a long-term deal. Suddenly, it is looking more and more likely that Wilkerson won't be a Jet beyond this season, if he makes it even that far. KRISTIAN DYER

'Cro' rips on Sherman

Rex Ryan may be upstate now, but the Jets still have plenty of bravado. Cornerback Antonio Cromartie took some shots at fellow big-mouth corner Richard Sherman of the Seattle Seahawks, saying that Sherman wasn't close to being one of the best corners around. "Go play in a defense where you don't have two All-Pro safeties. That's what I would tell him," Cromartie told Sirius XM. "Go follow the No. 1 receiver. Darrelle Revis has done that his whole career. I've done that. Patrick Peterson has done it. Joe Haden has done it. [Sherman] is the only defensive back that hasn't."
